OLD ADMINISTRATION OUT THE NEW ONE TAKES OFFICE

GOVERNOR W. F. FREAR.

THE BAR PAYS ITS RESPECTS

SUPREME COURT'S SPECIAL SESSION THIS MORNING FOR THE CHANGE OF JUSTICES.

Most impressive were the ceremonies attendant upon the resignation of Judge Walter F. Frear as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and the elevation of Associate Justice A. S. Hartwell to that position, and of S. M. Ballou to a seat as Associate Justice.

In spite of the fact that a heavy rain had been falling for an hour just prior to 9 o'clock, the hour set for the ceremonies, the Supreme Court room was well filled, including a generous sprinkling of ladies. Almost the full membership of the local Bar Association was present.

In his opening remarks, Chief Justice Frear stated that when he had first been elevated to the bench nearly

There is probably no medicine made that is relied upon with more implicit confidence than Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. During the third of a century in which it has been in use, people have learned that is the one remedy that never fails. When reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take. GOVERNOR GEORGE R. CARTER RELINQUISHES OFFICE AND FREAR TAKES HIS PLACE—THE NEW EXECUTIVE RECIPIENT OF MANY CONGRATULATIONS—CARTER DELIVERS HIS FAREWELL ADDRESS IN SPITE OF POOR HEALTH.

With appropriate ceremonies and addresses in the Supreme Court, followed by exercises of a similar nature at the Capitol, this morning, Chief Justice Walter F. Frear was succeeded by Associate Justice A. S. Hartwell; S. M. Ballou succeeded Hartwell as associate; A. L. C. Atkinson retired as Secretary of the Territory and was succeeded by E. A. Mott-Smith; George R. Carter relinquished the office of Chief Executive in favor of the former chief justice, and Charles R. Hemenway became the Attorney General of the Territory vice E. C. Peters.

The only attempt at decoration of the Throne Room aside from a beautiful bowl of roses on the small table on the rostrum, was the draping of a large American flag with one of Hawaii at the back of the stand.

The room was crowded to its limit of capacity. In a front section seats had been reserved on the Waikiki side for representatives of the consular force, with their wives. In a middle section the members of the heads of the departments with their wives were seated, while on the Ewa side of the room members of the military and naval forces, justices of the various courts, and federal and other officials, with their ladies sat. Among those who were thus accorded reserved seats were:

FREAR'S ADDRESS

Lord Bolingbroke, in his essay on the study and use of history, quoted from an ancient Greek, that "history is philosophy teaching by examples." One of the best philosophies which history thus teaches is that of faith in the future. This it does not alone by self-sacrificing deeds and brilliant achievements which excite admiration, but even more by aggregations or successions of events and conditions which disclose movements, relations and tendencies. He who looks solely to the immediate or the isolated risks finding cause for pessimism alone; he who takes a comprehensive view can scarcely avoid an uplift to heights of optimistic courage and endeavor. Weeds of bickering and greed and spite ever stand conspicuous in the foreground, but by raising our eyes

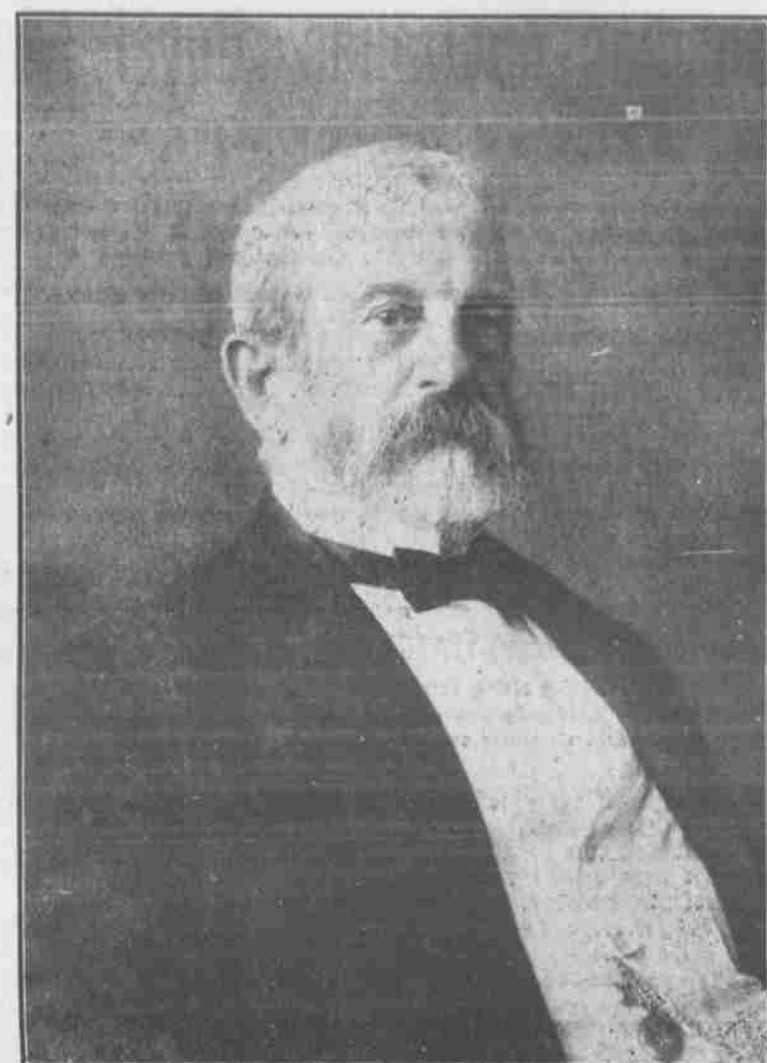

CARTER'S FAREWELL

"It is now almost four years since, in this very hall, under this historic canopy and on this very platform, trembling with fear, I read to an audience representing the people of Hawaii the few thoughts which occurred to my mind bearing on the responsibilities I was then about to assume. Some of you may remember I then said, that often when wrong I would be thought right and when right would be thought wrong. Actual experience demonstrates that this process is going on all the

From Frear's Inaugural

"Local government has been established without the baneful results predicted—more expensive at present and perhaps in some respects less efficient than centralized government, but on the whole more satisfactory and educative to the masses."

"The developments of seven years call for changes in the Organic Act of the Territory with a view to greater simplicity in the machinery of government, greater economy and efficiency in its administration and greater elasticity and scope in its powers."

"No unprejudiced person would deny that the highest interests of these islands require them to be peopled as far as may be by small landed proprietors."

"In general it would seem strange if the spirit that is converting what was once called the 'Great American Desert' into what is coming to be called the 'Bread Basket of the World' cannot insure success in a land of such salubrity of climate, fertility of soil, favorableness of location and natural attractiveness as these islands possess."

"The policies of small landed proprietorships and diversified industries are not necessarily antagonistic to the prosperity of the sugar try. There is no inherent reason for opposition to that industry; every reason for aiding it. Probably nowhere are business enterprises, large and small, conducted more generally under corporate forms, but probably nowhere are they conducted more honorably or with less abuse of capitalistic power."

"Indeed, far from being in opposition, the campaigns for small landed proprietorships and the sugar interests should be, for best results to each, in closest conjunction. It is not too much to expect this. Those in control of the sugar plantations are among the most public spirited of our people or of any people; more than that, they need the small settler as much as he needs them."
